

Tawnya Graef

"Suitable" should not simply mean that a site has enough physical space or is close to existing power infrastructure. It should mean that the location is safe and appropriate for the people who already live there, and that the concerns and disapproval of the surrounding community are meaningfully taken into account.