

Mary Harrington

I am very excited to see that Washington is taking a proactive role in reducing food waste by writing a plan full of recommendations on how government, retailers, food rescue operations, and the general public can prevent the wasting of edible food, properly donate edible food, and send the inedible food to beneficial end uses (like animal feed, composting, and energy recovery).