I am a single person and it's difficult to find items in smaller quantities at the grocery store. Therefore I have to buy more than I need but can't eat or use it all by the expiration date. I don't have a big freezer to freeze excess. There are some stores that now sell eggs by the half dozen. How about bread?? Why can't someone package smaller quantities of bread? I think more individual serving sizes would be a good idea. This would reduce food waste and packaging waste. Thank you!
