

Zero Waste Washington (Heather Trim)

My main comment is that there is a lot of detail that's in the statute and that detail is not carried forward into the rulemaking. And it, or in some cases, it's completely omitted or it's reworded in a way that is very different than what the statute intended. So I'm going through and kind of doing a side-by-side and trying to figure out all of those.

And I also want to mention that I agree, Shannon made a question, but really I will make it as a comment that negotiation for local governments is just like a huge red flag. I mean, they should have their costs covered and it should not be, well, the negotiation didn't go well, we're not going to do it. And that's basically kind of the way it's implied.

And that the education--these are just two examples--The education is not adequate for our populations across the state. Anyway, thank you so much.
