I think that the lists provided are very comprehensive. I still think that this only treats the symptoms and not the cause. There needs to be a change in how manufacturers use packaging, and creating new rules requiring sustainable or truly recyclable materials. They keep putting layers and layers of non-recyclable/ non-compostable packaging on products and leave it to consumers, local and state agencies to manage the mess. The real changes need to happen at the packaging level to reduce waste/ packaging in the first place.
