

Debbie Burkett

I'm not an engineer or an expert on toxic clean up but your pamphlet on the BNSF Parkwater Railyard cleanup made absolutely no sense to me. It sounds like you either capped it, causing the pollutants to remain where they were, or dug them up and reburied the contaminated soil at another location. How does either of those options make any sense to you? What was gained by either operation? Please explain.