

Robert Heumann

There is a pretty simple rule people are taught as kids. The executives at Chevron seem to have either forgotten or were never taught. Either way, the rule is: CLEAN UP AFTER YOURSELF! If a more accurate cost-benefit analysis was conducted I'm sure they would find the degradation of this wetland far exceeds the cost of cleaning it up. It is a public resource and should be restored and protected.