I'm happy to see a community-led organization like Estelita's taking on this affordable housing project and glad the state is helping to clean up the contaminated soil. I am concerned that the clean up site is right next to the neighborhood library with children and more vulnerable adults coming and going there. Will the air quality be affected in that area during clean up? I also hope the clean up does not limit access to the library. In addition, that site is in a busy area of the neighborhood. I hope project leaders avoid causing additional congestion or traffic safety issues in that area during clean up.
