

Sean Halberg

The plan for the upland areas seems inadequate and harmful over the long run. All contaminated soil should be removed in the upland area, or at least to a depth where capping is less about a barrier between contaminated soil and soil that is safe for humans and wildlife, and more about restoring the natural topography and landscape.