

Gretchen Gianotti

Vancouver lake has become unusable for the public to use in the summer with the increasing occurrence of toxic blue green algae.

Vancouver lake is over 10,000 years old. It is a shame the man made dredging through the years has altered the natural flow of water through the lake. With better flow of water connecting to the Columbia river, the lake could be restored to it's original state. Such a beautiful resource should be enjoyed by the people of Washington not avoided.