Dear DOE,

I am writing in support of the Cooke Aquaculture plan to raise Steelhead in net pens in the Salish Sea. In this day of trying to buy food that is raised locally, it is frustrating to see so much fish brought in from other countries. It is time for the United States to stop listening to the falsehoods about aquaculture and start raising their own fish. The fishing industry cannot meet the demand for fish and Washington State should not be fighting with a company that is trying to responsibly raise fish that are a welcome product in our seafood markets. Please grant this permit application.

Respectfully submitted,

Kelley Bright
