

Colleen Curtis

There are serious pollution and water quality risks posed by this industry, and this new proposal to expand net pen aquaculture will significantly impact the health of Puget Sound and our water quality.

My understanding is that tribal governments have not been included in these debates, and their input and participation is essential.