Does Cooke's application and the supporting documents fully consider all of the risks posed by this proposal to switch species and extend the life of net pen aquaculture in Puget Sound?

How is the expansion and continuation of open water net pen aquaculture likely to have a "significant adverse impact on water quality or human health"?

Is there additional information Cooke Aquaculture needs to provide or that Ecology needs to consider?

I am very opposed to this expansion. It is my request that you ensure that the serious pollution and water quality risks posed by this industry are fully considered by Ecology during this permitting process.
