

Jason Lepre

With all the info that is available, it blows my mind that these fish pens still seem like a good idea to some people. It also amazes me how companies can somehow "push the filing through" against environmental regulations. Um. OK? 50 years. 50 years until everything is extinct. Except what we continue to selectively breed of course.