

Christopher Webb

I strongly believe that aquaculture is an important part of food production, that can be achieved in a sustainable manner.

Having worked in the Aquaculture industry for a number of years in the UK, I have seen first hand the positive benefits this brings to communities along with providing a low carbon, protein source that is both healthy and nutritious.

As such I very much support Cooke Aquaculture, in their application to Washington State, to amend their permit to produce triploid Steelhead Trout.