

Brian Venable

After the ecological disaster that resulted from the last time one of these pens failed, it is clear that the long-term risk is not worth profits of one corporation. Further impact to the waters results from the pollution and antibiotics drifting into these delicate ecosystems. Already our native salmon and orca populations have been decimated. No more farming pens. Period.