I was born less than 2 miles from the Salish Sea, previously known as Puget Sound. Out of the ignorance of nature's ecology, it has been misused and polluted since the arrival of the first non-native peoples. The wild salmon runs are an age old and essential part of this body of water. The pens of non-native fish have already caused damage to the salmon and are not fit for human consumption because of the ways they are cultivated. The corporate mentality of this aquaculture does not take into account the health and safety of the salmon who are a living part of nature's wisdom.

This mentality has already tried every trick in the book to force the the community and its government to allow this travesty of nature to continue. It must not be allowed to continue.
