Having lived in the Puget Sound region since 1962, I have seen the great changes that state and local governments have made to try and keep Puget Sound a viable ecosystem for salmon, orcas and other native sea life; but we can and must do better. Tacoma has done a great job with its Tagro program, but it is time for everyone to step up their game, and the proposed regulations cannot be implemented soon enough. Thanks for your commitment to protect the Salish Sea.
