

Vicki Smith

Commercial enterprises, whatever their business, MUST adhere to all of the safety and environmental regulations as their price of admission for doing business there. This is the only right answer or they are actually putting the costs on local taxpayers or simply shifting the health costs onto local people through polluted air or water. All wrong! I am considering an Alaska cruise but don't want to be on ships that make money but expect others to clean up after them !