

Danielle Barcion

Although scrubbers have been touted by the cruise industry as a solution for treating toxic ship engine exhaust, in reality, all it does is convert air pollution into water pollution and dump this fossil fuel combustion wastewater straight into the ocean. In high traffic inlets like Puget Sound, the build up of scrubber dumping is compounding and has serious implications on endangered species like killer whales. That's not acceptable. Puget Sound should be the cruise industry's dumping ground. No company should be allowed to destroy nature.