

Spencer Rawls

Ban scrubbers. They don't reduce pollution, they just convert air pollution into water pollution. This damages our water ecosystems like the Puget Sound, putting already endangered species like orcas at even more risk. It also harms fish that people, including indigenous tribes like the Puyallup in particular, rely on for their food supply. We need laws that actually reduce pollution and require boats to use cleaner and less fuel, not just put it in the water instead of the air.