

Gloria Navan

We cruise as much as we can. Cruise lines constantly reassure passengers that the ships do not pollute and that a lot of money is spent to assure this.

If scrubbers are not eliminating pollution because they are discharging toxin laden wastewater into the ocean and endangering marine life, cruise ships should be made to immediately take effective measures to correct this.

Cruise companies bottom line depend on the ocean -- they should take good care of it.