

Charlotte Fremaux

Cruise ships are enormous producers of marine pollution. Human waste, bilge water, and fossil fuel pollution are devastating for the marine ecology. Our oceans are in peril, and endangered marine life in the Puget Sound, a unique ecosystem, is in particular danger from the concentration of intensely polluting water-craft like cruise ships. We must take responsibility for our impact on all environments by making decisions that protect them. The hiatus from the constant pressure of cruise ships on the environment, caused by the pandemic, has been a blessing. Don't allow the healing effect of this respite to be obliterated by allowing cruise ships to come back and dump their toxic waste. Please close the loophole and ban scrubbers, the use of which foments the production and use of the dirtiest fuel on the planet. I support amendment #2.