The ocean is not an huge waste processing plant. There is much life that lives there, some so deep they haven't been discovered yet. Cruise ships have a responsibility to care for this part of our earth, as well as on land. They charge high fees for their trips and from this must also be taken monies to pay for treatment of waste, sludge etc. We have one earth which must be shared with all creatures, whether on sea, on land or in the air. We are all interconnected. Man has too often been selfish and thought only of himself, his standard of living, what profits him. Screw everyone and every thing else.
