

Olivia Raine

The extremely broad language puts anyone keeping livestock at risk of losing the rights to farm, feed ourselves and our communities and take part in ecological restoration via responsible livestock management. Extreme government oversight puts anyone with livestock at risk, costs taxpayers money and puts community food systems at risk.