I am writing to endorse the Napeequa River as an Outstanding Resource Water designation. I visit this river monthly on a 20-year bird survey. I love seeing the clean water of the Napeequa flow into the White River. This summer, the Napeequa was milky white with glacial sediment. The mixing of the water at the confluence was fascinating. At that river confluence, American Dippers breed and raise their young. The river and its shoreline habitat support many birds and animals. It is a gem, and I hope this designation would help it remain so.
