As a Washington citizen, I want to see our precious fresh water sources protected. The Cascade, Napeequa, and Green Rivers are some of our state's most outstanding waterways with high water quality in critical old growth habitat. Important for the survival of endangered salmon, and northern spotted owls, these waterways also provide high value connections to our natural world for recreationalists. I have been fortunate to ski, climb, and hike around the headwaters of the Cascade and Napeequa Rivers and am a better citizen because of these experiences. I encourage Ecology to designate the Cascade, Green, and Napeequa river systems as the state's first Outstanding Resource Waters so that Washingtonians can enjoy these waters for generations to come.
