

Jesse McCullough

Unconnected drainage areas within a facility should be managed separately for purposes of corrective action progressions. Only a second or third benchmark exceedance within a given drainage area suggests that drainage area cannot be managed adequately with operational controls. A single exceedance of a parameter at two distinct drainage areas during different quarters does not mean operational controls are inadequate.