There is a need for public education and debate regarding this plan as it now exists. A 100 day comment period makes this action highly improbable. Therefore, I urge you to extend the comment period to 6-12 months.

If one wants to restrict a problem, one must first show that the problem exists. A major flaw in this plan, is that restrictions may be placed on land owners, without verifying that there is a problem in the first place. Suggest a change to indicate that before restrictions placed, the water quality be tested to demonstrate a problem and after the restriction is implemented, repeat testing to show that the particular action taken actually eliminated the pollution. This is only common sense.

Thank you
