

Charles Creed

As we address the very important issues surrounding environmental responsibility there are various aspects to consider. Being respectful and thoughtful towards positive impacts and policy is imperative to such topics. There is no doubt that by preserving the surrounding forests which shade our streams and provide homes to the wildlife that the decision is an obvious one. Not all necessarily have the means to speak for themselves and because language has provided barriers for communication we must at times resort to conscious and sensible tactics. The decisions we make today will affect the future generations to come and it is our duty to make the best ones possible. We must approve these efforts to protect the non-fish bearing perennial streams and ensure that there is optimal water quality for today and those to follow. Sincerely, Waabishki Binesi (White Eagle) Charles W. Creed
