

Phillip Norman

It is purely evil to pillage North American wilderness, forever ruining its habitability. This is in disdain for present inhabitants and those in the future needing habitation on a hotter planet. The grab is merely to enrich a few greedy investors and those witless on their "fund" coattails. Stop the madness, now!

The future of life on Earth must trend better, not worse, as planned in cities of more-progressive China (<https://www.c40.org/researches/constructing-a-new-low-carbon-future-china>). Don't foolishly accept that export of stolen methanol to China makes any sense.