

Tina Brakefield

My name is Tina Brakefield, I live in Vancouver and work as a stay-at-home mother to a 3-year-old daughter in run a sustainability law. I've come here today to talk about the refined ability project and how and why against it. Most of what I've written has been talked about and multiple other comments so I will go ahead and skip over those. One thing I will bring up and I always found this very interesting and no one has mentioned this yet. Is that while we are having the wildfires going on here there are at this moment five tropical cyclones that are simultaneously moving through the Atlantic right now. Now one of them, Sally finally hit yesterday the Florida Alabama border and unleashed the inches of rain in about four hours. That is about 30 months worth of rain and four hours. I'm from Austin Texas and I know someone recently came on and spoke about people from the South moving here.

It is happening because I am one of them. I was born in 1979 which was the first year that they did I think a climate change analysis. And for the entirety of my life, I have been watching things change. From when I was a young child until now. I have been dealing with, in Texas, 115 up to 120 ° summers nonstop for years now. People will be leaving that region. Because it will become inhabitable. And lastly I would like to say real quick, some numbers here. Someone mentioned we have a project giving 30 to $40 million in revenue. You know how much damage the fires will do, 130 to 150 billion in losses. So from million 2 billion do the mass. And reject this project and the refinery in the shoreline project for this. Thank you.
