

Susan Schenkel

How is it possible that eminent domain can be used to benefit a foreign company, especially one from a country that is often considered a rival to the United States? Pipelines would run across lands that will be seized through eminent domain all to benefit a Chinese company. How is this possible? How is this to the public benefit? Not only is this for a Chinese company, but adding more fossil fuels to our atmosphere actually does NOT benefit anyone globally except for the few people who are profiting off of fossil fuel extraction and use. I'm sure the Chinese people would also rather have a clean, renewable source of energy locally than having methanol shipped from abroad, adding to Climate Change worldwide.

Deny these permits, because you are the last line of defense on this. We must stop using fossil fuels and pretending that it doesn't matter. It matters!!!