

Craig Heverly

>> My name is Craig have really, I am 82, however you decide this, probably not affect me very much. My time is short. But I have three young grandchildren living in Tacoma, Dixon and-- speaking with them on my mind and on my heart.

They are just starting out in their lives. And your decision have huge impacts on those lives. And to start pouring carbon into the atmosphere, we have a hope of something close to a livable planet, this project is 180 ° in the wrong direction in the name of my grandchildren I ask you to turn it down. Thinking of them something else, looking ahead a time all come when either the supply of gas or the demand for methanol will dry up Northwest innovation works will make the business decision to sell or declare bankruptcy and disappear. The jobs will be gone and the people of Kalama will watch this huge Hoke standing on the shore rest over it fall apart.

The damage will be done to the town, to the river, to the water table, to the land, to the environment, to the air into the planet. And who is going to pay to clean up? Certainly not Northwest innovation. No. It it will fall to all the rest of us.

Were a criminal diversion of tax dollars that would be when we could have stopped it right here. In the name of Viola, Dixon and Eula, I am asking you all to turn down this.
