

Gianna Zanzi

To whom it may concern,

Hello. My name is Gianna Zanzi, I'm 21 years old, and I wanted to briefly offer my perspective and opinion on the proposed Kalama Manufacturing and Marine Export Facility. I'm currently writing you from my home, where I'm sitting in the state-deemed hazardous air from the ongoing Oregon wildfires, and missing the clear and blue skies that I once took for granted. Beyond the clear hazard that the Kalama Manufacturing and Marine Export Facility poses on not just the city of Kalama, but everywhere that the menthanol passes as it moves overseas to be made into plastic, I'm worried for what this facility might mean moving forward for future generations. If built, the menthanol manufacturing facility would introduce unimaginable amounts pollution into the air, as well as add more unnecessary contamination to the Columbia River through to the Pacific Ocean as it moves halfway across the world to be turned into plastic. What really is it all for? To add more plastic to the world and fuel to burn, while we're direly looking for solutions to reduce the impact that plastics have had on our environment for the past sixty years? To add more cash into the pockets of people who will never feel the effects of the the pollution that they've caused?

When the decision is made in regards to the proposed Kalama Manufacturing and Marine Export Facility, I ask to please consider the people that it would affect, and the blue skies that we take for granted.

Best,
Gianna Zanzi