

Mark Keely

Port of Kalama's determination to marry the shell company NWIW to Washington State is a disastrous greenwashing disguise. This refinery proposal will never pan out for the people of Cowlitz County and POK knows it. They are just using this latest project to try to get the 3.1 mile lateral pipeline in so that they lock us into 40 more years of fracked gas infrastructure and consumption. If they cared about jobs, they would have moved to a viable project on that 90-acres years ago. If they cared about climate, they would have moved to a viable green proposal years ago. DON'T BE FOOLED, Dept. of Ecology. You are being sold a line of BS. NWIW and the POK are throwing you red herrings that deprive the people of actual opportunities and bring to a standstill any potential sustainable businesses. DENY Kalama methanol. We must do better NOW.