If you call yourselves an innovations company, then try doing something innovative, creative, or new. plastic from petroleum is so yesterday. Fucking do something better with your money and resources. Something that you will be able to proudly tell your kids about in 50 years. Build the world's largest compostable plastic plant, the world's first carbon sinking plastic plant, the world's only algae based plastic plant. Something cool that this country will be proud of, and the world will look up to. Y'all are morons if you don't take your billions of dollars and do something that is so outdated. It's fucking 2020.
