

Cameron Wilkinson

>> I'm taking this to menace to talk about my support of this project. And my disappointment in the constant change in expectations of these companies that are bringing transitional fuel to the state of Washington. And it seems like every year we continue to make things more extreme for them to meet the requirements to build these projects and we don't look at the science, we just do scare the communities with facts that are not, coming up with facts that are not true. Just false facts that organizations are giving out there. And this project will be a great opportunity for Washington state to produce feedstock, to better clean our climate will bully.

For manufacturing up things we all use every day. Plastic, it's in everything, our clothing, a goes down medical supplies, everything. So I am just more or less as a citizen of Calais County I'm getting very frustrated with setting the bar constantly and the other issues of the production of methanol for the forest fires, things like that. This has nothing to do with this project for forest fires are happening because we have changed regulations on the forest to clean them up. And mother nature is taking care of the problem. I just want to end with that, I support this project. Thank you.