As the northwest forests are engulfed in flames during another unprecedented fire season and our communities fill with thick smoke, my hope is that we can all seriously reflect on questions that matter:

Is it in the public's best interest to allow a methanol refinery that will emit 4.6 million tons of climate pollution every year, becoming one of WA's largest greenhouse gas polluters? Should we permit a single corporation to profit by exporting fracked gas to Asia, at the expense of our waterways, fisheries, health, and our children's future? Is it ethical to further entrench our energy systems in the ways of fracked gas, at the expense of clean energy technology and innovation?
