

Cass Martinez

I live in the county across the river from the proposed facility. If The Kalama facility is permitted, it will have the unfortunate effect of making a second or third Northwest Innovation Works facility, as already proposed, more likely on our Oregon side, at Port Westward. Please consider then that a positive decision may cause two to three times more pollution, two to three times more over-withdrawal of river water. Secondly, the contract(s) involved, between the country of China and the small US port district(s), are between two very unequal parties, and the future consequences of such inequality are not being discussed, or even visualized. Our counties, even our states, do not have the wherewithal to contest future NWIW misbehavior and have a chance of prevailing at law.