

Emily Herbert

Thoughtful holders of the Common Good for Washington's Environment,
I appeal to your care for the well-being of all earth's creatures. Yes you have mandates for specific regulations. But there is a larger more essential duty in this time of climactic upheaval. As forces of money and self interest pursue yet another extractive polluting industry with far reaching impacts well beyond the boundaries of the project, it is time to stand for the common good. It is time to find your authority to deny any more such insults to the world that wants to continue living.
