

Derek Benedict

It makes no sense to spend billions of dollars on an environmentally destructive project that will yield few returns.

Our money would be better spent on investing in land-based solar and wind projects that are non-invasive to the ecology, and that are portable.