

Rick Brumble

Me thinks you are trying to hood wink people into believing pumped storage generates electricity. Be honest and tell people how much electricity is generated and how much is required to pump water uphill. A more honest explanation (but probably not approved by the marketing team) is that water will be pumped to the upper reservoir every night during low demand and released during times when power prices are highest. Prove me wrong.