

KERA ZEGAR

Flooding in the Chehalis Basin is a serious challenge and one that is worsening with climate change. But the proposed mega-dam is the wrong solution. The DEIS makes clear that this project would come with enormous costs, serious risks, and irreversible damage to salmon, wildlife, water quality, and Tribal treaty-protected resources while offering only limited flood-reduction benefits.