

Lora Storke

The Chehalis is an important waterway for the salmon as one of the last free flowing large waterways. It provides floodplains, wetlands, side channels and cold clean water, all essential for wild chinook salmon, which are in turn, essential for our endangered Southern Resident Killer whales. As a newer resident to the pacific northwest I am in awe of our natural beauty and these magnificent animals. I take our job as their stewards seriously as we all should. I OPPOSE the Chehalis dam. We need solutions that protect all of us.