

Cinda Johansen

Dams are deadly to migrating fish species for spawning because they are a barrier to the fish's movements. They cause low reproduction and cause the species to become endangered. Bringing down the dams on the Klamath has already seen salmon making their way up the river to spawn. It's a beautiful thing.