Constructing a dam on the Chehalis River would be a poor choice for the future of our watersheds in Washington State. We are in an era of dam removal not dam construction. Evidence shows that dams harm watersheds and salmon habitat. Restoring salmon habitat should be a top priority, not building a new dam that would hurt salmon runs in the Chehalis River. Like many members of the public, I am against the construction of a dam on the Chehalis River, and I hope this project will not move forward.
