

P Bryer

Even after years of opposition, a proposal to dam the free-flowing Chehalis River is still kicking around Washington State.

The Department of Ecology must end this failed idea and stop an enormous waste of money. The proposal could cost $2 billion and will permanently harm salmon and steelhead runs, hurt our fishing economies, and siphon funding from bigger-picture solutions. We can do better.

You must know all this, so why not do the right thing for your grandchildren?