

Jan Wachholz

Washington has positioned itself as a global climate leader, but approving this expensive and dirty project as-is would move our state in the wrong direction. TransAlta is deliberately misleading the public and state regulators must commit to a robust permitting process to protect the public interest and full consider the impacts. State agencies lie the WA Department of Ecology must not rubber stamp new fossil fuel plants without due diligence. Washington residents (like me) deserve better!!