Changing a coal plant to a methane plant does not move us towards the Washington state clean energy goal. I see this more as an excuse to make money and fuel AI data centers. This is not what the majority of residence in Washington supported any psychology needs to stop this action.

Why not turn the coal plant into an area for BESS.

Ecology should demand a full environmental impact statement. This would then reveal the impact of this plant into the future and how it would not meet the goals that we have set in our state.
